Wäpahki, meaning tomorrow, is a United Way funded partnership between Chokecherry Studios, Okihtcitawak Patrol Group, and Prairie Harm Reduction, hosting a youth led talking circle and art therapy program which was co-founded by Kiyari and other community members.

"When I started high school, I was having a hard time with racism, transience, and mental health and addictions. Chokecherry was the space that we came up with. A couple of years later we were able to make it come true. Wäpahki became our break space where we get to talk about these barriers and not have to worry about what other people think about it. Talking circles have given us a platform to speak about these issues." - Kiyari

Together we can make local issues like mental health and social isolation, #UNIGNORABLE. ❤️
